How to Fasten Cows.

corres ondent at Golden's Bridge, N. Y., asks what he can use in the place of stauchtons in his cowstails. He is thoroughly dissatisfied with these.

He suggests what we consider to be the best form of fastening, that is, an upright pole, three inches in diamever, at the lett side of the cow's on our LAKES OR RIVERS WITHOUT IT.

We have recently examined a cowstable fitted up in this manner, which seems to us as nearly complete as any that we know. The distance from the front of the stall to the gutter six feet two inches. Two feet of the front is taken off for the manger, the them side of which next to the passageway is boarded up to prevent out feed and mest from being thrown out and wasted. The side of the manger nearest the cattle is bordered by a two-inch plank six inches high. The fastening-poles stand immediately against these planks, and they are Iwen fastened top and bottom. The four feet two inches left between the fastening-poles and the gutter is ample standing room for average size cows. In one part of the barn a little more room is given, and the cattle here are much more soiled, the manure dropping on the planks on which they lie. It is usual to clasp the cow's neck with a short chain, of which a large link plays up and down the pole. There have been accidents resulting from the binding of the rings on the poles. In the case which we are describing there is a simple leather strap around the cow's neck, which is buckled loose enough to include the pole. It looked awkword, but was said to be satisfactory. -N. Spontaneous Combustion of Rags.

In view of the recent destruction Chicago, it will not be a miss to speak of some late experiments in spontaneous combustion. A Detroit chemist, last March, took a piece of threadbare cetton cloth, smeare! it with boiled linseed oil, and packed it in the center of a chest filled with paper and rags. Although the room was not tight and the weather was cold, there was a smell of fire about the trunk in eight days Unpacking it the experimenter found the rag balf charred. In April be made a similar experiment with a pair of painter's overhalfs, which he rolled up with pine shavings, and crowded in next to the roof-boards of a loft. In a week the smell of smoke alarmed a werkman in the next room, and the overhalls were found to be on And during the hottest weather handful of old cotton rags, not smeared with oil, became hot enough when bung up in a tin box in the sun, to light reatches which had been placed among them. These facts show the necessity of caution in putting away rans, especially those that may be saturated with oil, benzine or other inflammable substance.

HARDLY any position has attached to such grave responsibilities as that o the locomotive engineer. A moment's negligence, carelessness, or his own incompetency, may be attended with a tearful loss of life. No wonder, then. that the first impulse after bearing of some terrible rallroad accident is to criminate the engineer. The locomo-tive engineers of the United States and of Canada have been holding a convenhis annual address, the president sough to explain the cau e of many railroad accidents, and to give certain rules of hereafter, in order to avoid accusation. He advised them to observe strictly the road rules. If they be found impractiexble, they will be repealed. 'On some time cards," say be, "the schedule is so fast that no engineer can make the regard to passing switches and stations; but let an accident happen, and an offiial soints to this rule to screen himself. 'Abourd regulations are undoubtedly esponsible for many railroad accidents. sat so are negligent and incompetent that so are negligent and incompetent engineers. He also, advises that engineers. MEMPHIS. TENN., June 3, 1871. Mours: Manufield & Higher.
GENTLEMEN: I had a mule which was laid up this season for three weeks with swinney in its worst form. I commenced the use of your Magic Arnica Liniment, and in two weeks he was perfectly enred and as hearty as ever. This Mule is a valuable one, and cost me $525. You can readily perceive with this evidence and experience, I can give your Magic Arnic Liniment my cordial support and indorsement, and I do cheerfully recommend it to all planters and owners of stock as a remedy which should always be kept on hand, as I know from what I have heard rom others, that this Liniment the YEAY BEST external remedy ever yet discovered, and that it will cure promptly all passes and aches, whether in man or beast.
